In recent time the concept of reading of Books or articles on different subjects has changed significantly, now books are available with classified titles to meet specific requirement of the individual. Here simply by seeing the title of this Book as "The Hill Cart Road" many of us may categories it as a "Guide Book" for the tourists to visit Darjeeling but actually it is not of that kind, it is a "Collection of personal Letters" describing different moments of living and visiting places in Darjeeling and adjacent areas more than twenty four years from now. The author of this book had written many letters to his only daughter, Durga to describe different moments of her childhood days of staying and visiting different places in the country. Long Back the author of the book worked for a West Bengal Housing Board (Establishment under Government West Bengal) with his place of posting at Siliguri then it was in Darjeeling District. At that time his daughter was about four years old and occasionally she had been at Siliguri Town. During that period she visited different nearby places along with her parents. In this book there are total twenty letters to describe some memorable moments of their staying in a small Apartments located just by the side of well known "Hill Cart Road" which was leading to famous tourist destination 'Darjeeling'. Little girl Durga learnt many things through close her observation and also simply by interaction with her parents and others. Those days she enjoyed then new environments and the natural beauty of the surroundings there. This book is all about those feelings and experiences of living in Darjeeling and visiting the nearby places in a very long past

"Behind the Sound Cart: A Veteran's Guide to Sound on the Set" details how the entire Sound team functions on today's movie and television sets, while illuminating the overall picture of life on a production. Patrushkha takes you from the first work call to the final wrap, explaining the order of the work and the details that her decades of experience provides, so you may avoid mistakes that may sabotage your career before it's even started. This book describes the job of the UST (Utility Sound Technician), a career almost invisible, yet extremely interesting, exciting-and paying up to six figures a year. This book details how to act, how to relate to the crew, how to deal with and solve problems that are not just about sound itself-things you don't learn at film school. Patrushkha Mierzwa, one of the first female boom operators in Hollywood, has worked on over 80 movies and television projects for major directors including Robert Rodriguez, Quentin Tarantino, James Gray, and Robert Altman. She has been a judge for the Emmys, an IATSE Sound Local 695 director, and given workshops globally over her long career in the industry. Her Sound Oscar-nominated shows include "Ad Astra" and "Once Upon a Time?in Hollywood". This book condenses 40 years of experience into a practical guide for you to be able to walk onto a film set with the confidence of a sound ninja. -Stuart Wilson, Sound Oscar winner, 1917 This is my go-to reference and should be in every film school on the globe. -Simon Clark, Head of Location Sound Recording, National Film & Television School, England I think this is really going to help students, super down to earth, logical and clear. I knew that it'd be a great book after your visits and sessions with our students. You're a wonderful speaker and your voice comes right through clearly and concisely in this book. Congratulations again and I hope we get to invite you back to Greenwich again in the near future! -Dr Andrew Knight-Hill, University of Greenwich, London.

Cocaine- and amphetamine-regulated transcript (CART), as its name implies, was initially identified as an upregulated transcript in response to psychostimulant administration. Consequently, it has been posited to play a role in psychostimulant abuse and dependence. Spurred on by the finding that a polymorphism in the CART gene was associated with alcoholism, we initiated studies designed to elucidate the role of CART peptide in alcohol dependence. We first investigated the functional significance of CART peptide in alcohol dependence in vivo using a CART KO mouse. We found that CART KO mice had a significant decrease in ethanol consumption that could not be attributed to differences in total intake, taste perception, metabolism, or sensitivity to ethanol. In vitro we found that CART peptide facilitated NMDA receptor-mediated currents in central amygdala neurons. Given the emerging role of CART peptide in anxiety and stress, we decided to examine basal and stress-induced anxiety behaviors in CART KO mice. Under basal and acute stress conditions, CART KO mice did not differ in anxiety-like behaviors from WT mice; however, in response to a stressor, CART KO mice exhibited a potentiated corticosterone response. Using chronic intermittent ethanol exposure (CIE), we tested CART KO and WT mice for common signs of ethanol dependence including an escalation of volitional consumption and the presence of withdrawal-induced anxiety. We further investigated glutamatergic neuroadaptations within the central amygdala of CART KO and WT mice following CIE exposure and early withdrawal. CIE increased ethanol consumption and anxiety-like behaviors in mice of both genotypes but to a lower extent in CART KO mice. Electrophysiologically, CIE enhanced spontaneous excitatory postsynaptic currents in both genotypes and decreased the probability of presynaptic release in WT mice only. We believe that these electrophysiological neuroadaptations contribute to the development of ethanol dependence and may mediate withdrawal-induced anxiety behaviors. Overall, these studies indicate a role for CART peptide in alcohol dependence and specifically in modulating ethanol withdrawal-induced anxiety.

5 Things Every Golf Cart Owner Needs to Know about Their Golf Cart's Batteries TAB/Electronics

When Shelley Wachsmann began his analysis of the small ship model excavated by assistants of famed Egyptologist W. M. F. Petrie in Gurob, Egypt, in 1920, he expected to produce a brief monograph that would shed light on the model and the ship type that it represented. Instead, Wachsmann discovered that the model held clues to the identities and cultures of the enigmatic Sea Peoples, to the religious practices of ancient Egypt and Greece, and to the oared ships used by the Bronze Age Mycenaean Greeks. Although found in Egypt, the prototype of the Gurob model was clearly an Aegean-style galley of a type used by both the Mycenaeans and the Sea Peoples. The model is the most detailed representation presently known of this vessel type, which played a major role in changing the course of world history. Contemporaneous textual evidence for Sherden-one of the Sea Peoples-settled in the region suggests that the model may be patterned after a galley of that culture. Bearing a typical Helladic bird-head decoration topping the stempost, with holes along the sheer strakes confirming the use of stanchions, the model was found with four wheels and other evidence for a wagon-like support structure, connecting it with European cultic prototypes. The online resources that accompany the book illustrate Wachsmann's research and analysis. They include 3D interactive models that allow readers to examine the Gurob model on their computers as if held in the hand, both in its present state and in two hypothetical reconstructions. The online component also contains high-resolution color photos of the model, maps and satellite photos of the site, and other related materials. Offering a wide range of insights and evidence for linkages among ancient Mediterranean peoples and traditions, The Gurob Ship-Cart Model and Its Mediterranean Context presents an invaluable asset for anyone interested in the complexities of cultural change in the eastern Mediterranean at the end of the Bronze Age and the beginning of the Iron Age.

That Unforgettable Golf Cart! Triangle Interactive, Inc.

We've all seen that lone shopping cart sitting on the edge of a parking lot. Who goes and gets it and brings it home? Why are the mouths of catsup bottles so narrow? What will the new silence sound like? Droll, slightly dystopian, and delightfully wobbly, this collection of comic prose poems and short fiction by audio drama producer and playwright, Brian Price, is a fine introduction to his unique world of magic realism, stage monologue, and childhood memories. Perfect for public performance, private soliloquies, or just reading with your mouth full during lunch.
